PREFACE

The use of quantitative data as an instrument of micro planning has assumed greater importance because of the failure of macro planning to filter down the benefits of educational development at the grass roots level. Secondly the educational development in Pakistan has not made sufficient improvement inspite of several policies, plans and programme stipulated by the Government of Pakistan. Thirdly the planning process has a major constraint of the timely availability of reliable data on critical indicators that measures the performance of education sector.

The analyses made so far reveals that to transmit the gains of education development to the masses particularly in rural areas and urban poor, changes are required in organizational arrangements. This need led to the decentralization of educational planning not only to provincial level but it has gone down to the district level. This has been made possible through the restructuring of Educational Management Information System (EMIS) in the Country. At present each province has established the EMIS and decentralized it to the district level through the establishment of district EMIS cells. The Provinces and the Federal Education Management Information System (FedEMIS) organize school census each year and collect information from the field against the critical indicators agreed in the National Technical Committee meetings. The provincial information is compiled by the respective provinces and the information regarding Federal Areas (FANA, FATA, AJK and ICT) is organized at the Academy of Educational Planning and Management, Islamabad. The FedEMIS plays a key role in providing technical support to the provinces on need basis and bring up a National Publication every year on School Education Statistics.

The efforts made by the FedEMIS in streamlining the programmes and activities of the Education Management Information System and providing technical support to the provinces have been well appreciated.

The data for the year 1993-94 is now available as a manifestation of the efforts of FedEMIS. I am confident that this information will be useful to policy makers, planners, managers, researchers and other readers of this document.
